"One member in particular stood out to me during the hours and hours of planning meetings, phone calls, data analysis, strategy sessions, public meetings, and behind-the-scenes work on this incredibly complex process," said TLTA President Rodney Anderson. "Cass's willingness to share his extensive expertise in the regulatory ratemaking process was invaluable. His efforts, though largely out of the spotlight, were crucial to our work, and we are deeply grateful for everything he has done."

Burton's leadership and tireless efforts have made an impact on our industry, extending far beyond his role in the regulatory review.
